Graduated in Applied Mathematics - scientific branch, Master in Electrical and Computer Engineering by FEUP and PhD in Information Sciences from Universidade Fernando Pessoa. He is currently Adjunct Professor at School of Technology at the Polytechnic Institute of Cávado and Ave, where he was chairman of the pedagogical council (2 years), director of the Computing course (4 years), Erasmus coordinator Member of the CPAD (Center for Processing and Data Analysis) where he developed work in the field of biostatistics. He carries out research in the areas of Artificial Intelligence, Health Informatics, Quality of Life, Quality Assessment Systems, Biostatistics, Information Systems and Databases. He developed the QoLiP project at the Porto IPO. He has authored several publications in journals and international conferences with ISI indexation and / or SCOPUS. She has been directing final year projects since 1992 and has guided two completed Master's theses and is guiding four Master's theses 3 of which in the area of clinical decision support systems. Organized 3 national conferences and is an integrated member of LIACC - Laboratory of Artificial Intelligence and Computer Science of the University of Porto and associate member of CEISUC - Center for studies and research in Health of the University of Coimbra.